Cost of Attendance Budgets for Medical School

There is a unique cost of attendance budget published by the Office of Student Financial Services for each year of the MD program. The cost of attendance budget includes the expected costs for tuition and fees, educational expenses, and personal expenses for the associated year of the program.

Transportation costs are included in the educational expenses budget for years where travel is a required curricular component of the MD program. This Academic Year, the estimated cost for transportation for 3rd year students is $2,400 and for 4th year students it is $2,000.

If you are currently receiving financial aid	The cost of transportation is factored into your cost of attendance and financial aid funding does include these expenses
If you are not currently receiving financial aid, but need assistance with your expenses	You are eligible to apply for optional loans, if you require financial assistance to address any portion of your educational costs. You can contact studentfinancialservices@mssm.edu to receive more information.
If you are self-financing	You are responsible for the associated travel expenses for travel to/from clinical activities not included in the below guidelines for using the Sinai Uber account.
